Wetlands play an important role in the ecosystem(生态系统). However, about 35 percent of the wetlands have been lost in the past 50 years, said the UN. Hoping to protect the wetlands, Cui Luoyao and Lyu Haoyan, two 14-year-old girls from Beijing created(创造) a mudskipper(弹涂鱼) amphibious robot(两栖机器人). They won the Gold Award of the 19th Soong Ching Ling Award for Children's Invention on Aug. 17.

"We wanted to make a simple robot to help collect data(数据), but traditional robots faced problems in wetlands," Cui said. As an amphibious fish, mudskippers are small and can move freely in wetlands. Inspired(启发) by the little creature, they added a special chest(胸腔) and tail fin(鳍) to their robot. The fin can help the robot move freely on land and swim underwater. They also learned coding to control (控制) the robot with their phones from far away, up to 300 metres. What's more, they put in different sensors(传感器) to see plants and check water quality(质量).

But things didn't always go well. How to keep the main electronics(电子元件) dry when the robot went underwater was a big problem during testing. "The 3D printed parts we used couldn't seal(密封) well," Lyu said. After trying different ways, they found that placing rubber rings in the gaps(缝隙) worked well to stop water from getting in.

After successfully controlling their robotic mudskipper on land and underwater, they were happy with their success. "I feel so proud because our robot can help look into the places that people cannot reach," said Cui.

24. The two girls created the robot to _____.

A. protect the wetlands　　B. check water quality

C. complete their schoolwork　　D. learn more about amphibious fish

25. What does "the little creature" in Paragraph 2 refer to?

A. Mudskippers.　　B. Wetlands.　　C. The robot fish.　　D. The animals.

26. What did the two girls use to control their robot?

A. A tail fin.　　B. Their phones.　　C. A computer.　　D. Different sensors.

27. How did the two girls keep the electronics dry when the robot was underwater?

A. By sealing the robot with tape.　　B. By adding a special cover to it.

C. By using more 3D printed parts.　　D. By putting rubber rings in the gaps.

In the past, asking local people for directions was the most reliable(可靠的) way to find your way. They knew not only the way, but also the traffic, interesting places to visit, and the most famous restaurant nearby.

Today, technology(技术) offers new ways to guide, such as online driving-directions and smartphones with navigation apps(导航软件). People don't have to ask others for directions very often, for the directions are always in your pocket, as long as you have enough battery(电源) life and a data (数据) collection.

In the past few years, I didn't have a chance to travel or ask for directions because I was busy working. But yesterday, when driving to another city, I took wrong turns and lost my way. With my phone battery dead and no navigation device(设备) in my car, I had to stop and ask for help.

I saw an old man coming out of a house and asked if he knew the way to the city. At first he was a little cautious because he didn't know who I was, but when I told him that I had no technology to help me, he relaxed and started giving advice. He warned(警告) me of the exit that could be easily missed and advised some places to have lunch. We talked about the rain, guessing whether it would soon stop, then said goodbye, and I went on my way.

Finally, I arrived at my hotel. Even though it rained all the time and I spent a good part of the drive in traffic, I felt wonderful. It is nice to know that a stranger really would like to spend some time helping me. I wish that I would ask for directions more often, not only while travelling, but also in everyday life. The directions I will get may not always be right, but they will always come from the heart.

28. What can we infer(推断) from the first two paragraphs?

A. Technology makes it more difficult to guide.

B. People know the way well in modern society.

C. The way of getting directions has changed a lot.

D. Asking local people for directions is not reliable now.

29. We don't have to ask others for directions today because _____.

A. the traffic has changed a lot　　B. smartphones have become cheaper

C. people now use navigation technology　　D. local people no longer know the area well

30. What does the underlined word "cautious" in the fourth paragraph mean?

A. Honest.　　B. Careful.　　C. Angry.　　D. Excited.

31. How did the writer feel after arriving at the hotel?

A. He felt bored with the man.　　B. He felt touched by the old man's help.

C. He felt bad because of the heavy traffic.　　D. He felt wonderful because the rain stopped.

A father was very worried about his son, who, at 15 or 16 years old, seemed to show no signs of courage(勇气). In daily life, the boy would shy away from any challenges(挑战), whether it was trying a new sport at school or speaking up in clash. So, the father went to see a famous boxing(拳击) coach and asked him to help his son. The coach agreed and said, "Leave your son with me. In three months, I promise he will be a changed person. However, you must not visit him during this time." The father agreed.

Three months later, the father returned to pick up his son as promised. The coach held a friendly match between the boy and an experienced boxer to show the training results. As soon as the match began, the boy was knocked down hard. But to everyone's surprise, he quickly got up and faced his opponent(对手) again. He was knocked down again right away, but quickly jumped back to his feet.

This happened again and again. The boy was knocked down 16 times, yet each time he stood up, decided to face the challenge. Sweat ran down his face and he held his fists tight, which showed he was really brave.

The coach turned to the father and asked, "Do you think your son's action shows courage?" "I'm so sad. I never thought that after sending him here for three months of training, he would still get knocked down so easily," the father replied.

The coach shook his head and said, "I really feel sorry for you. You're missing the point. You only see the falls, the superficial(表面上的) winning or losing. Don't you see the courage of your son to get up each time? That's true strength. A strong person isn't someone who never falls, but someone who rises every time they do. That's true courage."

32. Why did the father want his son to learn boxing?

A. To train him to be braver.　　B. To make his body stronger.

C. To make him learn to follow rules.　　D. To help him become an excellent boxer.

33. What happened to the boy during the friendly match?

A. He refused(拒绝) to fight back.　　B. He won the match easily.

C. He got knocked down many times.　　D. He couldn't get up at the end of the match.

34. How did the father feel at first about the result of the match?

A. He felt unhappy.　　B. He was angry.　　C. He felt bored.　　D. He was excited.

35. Why did the coach think the boy showed true strength?

A. He never felt sorry for himself.　　B. He won the match in the end.

C. He kept on training for three months.　　D. He was brave enough to get up after each fall.

认真阅读下面短文,从短文后各题所给的六个选项中选出五个可以填入空白处的最佳选项。

I was always worried about careless mistakes before. I often thought they were just about "not being careful". But over time, __36__ We need to change how we work out problems.

I start by understanding that everyone makes mistakes. __37__ Accepting this makes me feel less stressed and helps me get better. For example, once I made a mistake in a maths test because I was in a rush. Knowing it was common to mess up(搞砸) sometimes made me less hard on myself.

Later, __38__ I write down what I did wrong and organize my mistakes. This helps me learn from my mistakes. I even add little notes on how I could do better next time.

Next, __39__ For maths, there are steps like checking answers. For writing, I review the paper and do a grammar check. Each time I feel worried, I take a deep breath, rethink my way and slow down my thinking. This helps me catch mistakes before they happen.

What's more, I celebrate my improvements(改善), no matter how small. __40__ Like when I got one more question right in a quiz than last time, I treated myself to a small piece of chocolate. It really made me keep going and be more careful.

A. It is simply a part of being human.

B. I decide to keep a journal(日志) of my mistakes.

C. I make checklists(检查清单) for different subjects.

D. I learned that these mistakes could show how we think.

E. These checklists become my guides, helping me through my work.

F. This way not only makes me feel sure about my abilities, but also helps me improve.

36. _____ 37. _____ 38. _____ 39. _____ 40. _____

六、阅读与回答问题(本题共5小题;每小题2分,满分10分)

请认真阅读下面短文,并根据短文内容回答问题。

Visiting museums or going on study tours is becoming very popular. Museums are now open for longer hours because so many people want to visit them. Not only history and archaeology enthusiasts (考古学爱好者) but also many common people are visiting museums.

This shows people are interested in culture and travel, which is good for museums. But with more visitors, museums need to think of new ways to help people learn and enjoy their visit.

The Suzhou Museum did some things that other museums can learn from. They found out what visitors really want and made improvements(提高) to make their visit better.

Museums Can Be Part of Tourism

Museums can work with local attractions to improve the visitor experience(体验). The Suzhou Museum found out many visitors were young and middle-aged women who use social media. So, they made a small book that tells about the museum and other fun places in Suzhou.

Using Technology(技术)

Museums can use computers and the internet to show things in a new way. Some museums offer virtual tours of their exhibits(虚拟展览), allowing people to explore(探索) from home. This is a cool way to learn about history without leaving your chair.

Learning Outside School

The Chinese government encourages (鼓励) students to visit museums to have a deeper understanding of history and culture. In schools, students can talk about history, take classes about old things, and help out at museums. In Jiangsu, some teachers are working with museums to make this happen.

Helping Older People

Museums can help older visitors by providing clear signs and easy-to-read information. The Suzhou Museum talked to them to find out what they like and how they can make their visit better.

In a word, only by understanding the real needs of the people can museums provide better cultural services(服务).

61. Why are the museums open for longer hours?

62. How can museums show things in a new way?

63. What does the Chinese government encourage students to do?

64. How can museums provide better cultural services?

65. What do you think of going on a study tour of a museum? (请自拟一句话作答)

七、翻译句子(本题共5小题;每小题2分,满分10分)
