In the age of smartphones and social media, many people think "friends" are just names on a screen. ___16___ for 14-year-old Wang Yu, a true friend is someone who stands by you, even when you're not ___17___.

Wang Yu met Li Jia at a summer camp for ___18___ lovers last year. They spent hours discussing how to improve their robot models and soon became close friends.

One month ago, Wang Yu's robot project for the school competition ___19___ a problem. His main circuit board (电路板) broke, and he had no money to buy a new one. He felt ____20____ and even wanted to give up. When Li Jia found out, she didn't just send a "cheer up" message. She ___21___ her own pocket money to buy a new circuit board and brought it to Wang Yu's home the next day.

"I know how important this project is to ___22___," Li Jia said. "We're friends, and friends help each other out, not ___23___ chat online." Wang Yu was deeply moved. With Li Jia's help, his robot won the second prize in the competition.

After that, Wang Yu realized that true friendship isn't about ___24___ hobbies. It's about being there when your friend needs you.

Last week, Li Jia had a hard time with her ___25___ exam. Wang Yu made a study plan for her and helped her practice English speaking every evening. "Li Jia helped me when I was in trouble," Wang Yu said. "Now it's my turn to ___26___ her."

In a world where many relationships are based on digital interactions, Wang Yu and Li Jia's friendship shows that true friends still ____27____ the old ways—caring, supporting, and being present. They ____28____ that no matter how advanced technology becomes, a friend's kindness and help are always more ___29___ than any online message. Their story has also inspired other students in their class. Many of them now spend less time ___30___ on social media and more time hanging out with their friends in real life. "Wang Yu and Li Jia taught us that friendship is not just a digital connection," said their classmate Zhang Tao. "It's something real and valuable."

When people talk about themselves in English class, they often start with their jobs. “I am a student.” “My father is a worker.” “My mother is a teacher.” After hearing this again and again, you may feel that everyone’s life sounds the same.

But a job only tells you how a person makes a living. It doesn’t tell you who the person really is.

People choose their hobbies freely. They spend time and energy on them without being asked. That is why hobbies often show a person’s true interests, personality, and even values.

My uncle works in an office and spends most of his day in front of a computer. However, on weekends, he wakes up before sunrise to go fishing. He keeps a small notebook and writes down the weather, the place, and the size of every fish he catches. Looking at the notebook, you would never think he is "just an office worker".

I used to think my own hobbies were nothing special. I like repairing old things—broken radios, clocks, even toys. One day, my grandfather saw me working and told me he did the same when he was young, because his family could not pay for new things. Suddenly, my hobby felt like a small bridge between the past and the present.

So next time in English class, instead of saying "There are four people in my family" or "My father is a teacher", try starting with something else. Ask about hobbies, and stories will naturally follow.

34. What does "That" refer to in Paragraph 3?

A. People talk about their jobs.
B. People choose hobbies by themselves.
C. People spend time at work.
D. People are asked to introduce themselves.

35. Why does the writer tell the story about himself and his grandfather?

A. To show how a hobby can have special meaning.
B. To explain how he learned to repair things.
C. To show that hobbies are always better than jobs.
D. To prove that old skills are still important today.

36. What can we infer according to Paragraph 5?

A. They are still living a poor life.
B. His hobby brought him and his grandfather closer.
C. He and his grandfather no longer repair old things.
D. He decided to learn how to build a bridge from his grandfather.

37. What is the best title of the passage?

A. Jobs Decide Who We Are
B. English Class Should Be More Serious
C. Hobbies Tell More Than Jobs
D. Everyone Needs a Special Hobby

C

Mary skipped round the gardens, resting every few minutes. It was a good long skip, but before she had gone halfway, she became so breathless that she stopped with a little laugh. There was the robin (知更鸟) swaying on a long branch of ivy (常春藤). He had followed her. As Mary skipped toward him, she felt something heavy in her pocket against her at each jump.

"You showed me where the key was yesterday," she said. "You are going to show me the door today!"

The robin flew onto the top of the wall and sang a loud, lovely trill (颤音). Nothing is as lovely as a robin when he shows off.

Mary had heard much about Magic in her stories, and she always said what happened next was Magic.

A gust (阵风) of wind rushed down the walk, strong enough to sway the branches and the ivy hanging from the wall. Mary had stepped close to the robin, and suddenly the wind blew some ivy aside, and she jumped and caught it in her hand. She had seen something under it—a round knob (把手) covered by leaves. It was the knob of a door.

She used her hands to push the leaves away. Even though the ivy was thick, it moved easily like a curtain (窗帘). Mary's heart started beating fast. The robin continued to sing, as if he were as excited as she was. What was this under her hands which was square and made of iron, with a hole in it?

It was the lock of the door that had been closed for ten years. She put her hand in her pocket, drew out the key, and found it fitted. She put the key in and turned it with both hands.

Then she looked behind her to see if anyone was coming. No one ever did come. She held back the ivy and pushed back the door which opened slowly—slowly.

Then she slipped through it, shut it behind her, and stood breathing fast with excitement, wonder, and delight. She was standing inside the secret garden.

38. How did Mary find the door knob hidden under the ivy?

A. A gust of wind moved the ivy and blew it away.

B. She felt it after pushing all the leaves aside by hand.

C. The robin pulled the ivy apart with its claws.

D. She followed the robin's song into the secret garden.

39. How did Mary feel when she touched the iron lock and found the hole in it?

A. Calm and patient.

B. Afraid and worried.

C. Excited and nervous.

D. Disappointed and sad.

40. According to the passage which of the following is true?

A. Mary had never seen the robin before that day.

B. Mary entered the secret garden through the hidden door.

C. Mary discovered the hidden door by herself.

D. Mary found the key and door at the same time.

41. What did the robin do in the story?

A. It did nothing but watch Mary all the time

B. It guided Mary to the garden.

C. It tried to keep Mary away from the garden.

D. It followed Mary's orders to find the garden.

D

Far below the ocean's surface, sunlight slowly disappears. The water becomes colder, darker, and quieter. To humans, the deep-sea area seems empty and lifeless.

The deep sea usually refers to ocean areas deeper than 1,000 meters. At that depth, sunlight cannot reach, and plants cannot grow. The pressure is very high, and the temperature is close to freezing. For a long time, people believed that no animals could survive there. But in fact, it is home to many living things.

_____. Many deep-sea animals have bodies that help them live in darkness. Some fish have very large eyes to catch even the weakest light. Others have no eyes at all. Instead, they use special senses to feel movement in the water. One of the most surprising abilities is bioluminescence—the ability to produce light. Some animals use light to find food, while others use it to scare enemies or attract mates. In the deep sea, light can mean the difference between life and death.

Although humans have explored only a small part of the deep ocean, each new discovery shows that life is more adaptable (适应性强的) than we once believed.

42. What did people think of the deep sea earlier?

A. It was warmer than normal water.

B. It was full of dangerous animals.

C. It could not support life.

D. It was brighter than expected.

43. Which heading best fits the blank?

A. Why is the deep sea so dangerous to humans?

B. How do animals survive in the deep sea?

C. Why can't plants grow in the deep sea?

D. When did humans begin to explore the deep ocean?

44. What is bioluminescence mainly used for in the deep sea?

A. To help some animals survive.

B. To grow food.

C. To attract enemies.

D. To change body shape.

45. What does the writer want to show in the last paragraph?

A. Humans have fully explored the deep sea.

B. Life in the ocean is simple.

C. The deep sea is dangerous to humans.

D. Life can adapt to the environment.

五、阅读表达（共5题；每题2分，计10分）

阅读短文，回答下面5个问题。（每个回答不超过8个词）

When Jan comes to the old building, she hears excited voices from inside. She sees three boys looking at the things inside her time capsule.

"Stop! Put the things back. They're mine!"

Jan shouts. But the boys look up and laugh. Then they continue going through the capsule.

"Put those things back!"

Jan shouts again. A boy with long fair hair looks at her, "Girls aren't allowed here. This is our land." Jan points at the time capsule and her things, "And that's my time capsule. You're stealing." The fair-haired boy laughs, "Time capsule? It's a biscuit tin."

"A biscuit tin with no biscuits inside," says a boy with glasses. "Tom, I'm hungry."

Jan looks at the boy with curly hair. "Tom? Is that your name? Please give me my things. If you want, I can give you some biscuits in exchange."

"So where are the biscuits?" Tom asks.

"In my house. The house by the apple tree. The tree where you found my biscuit tin." Jan answers.

"Take us to your house. If you give us some biscuits, you can have the biscuit tin." Jan nods. "OK."

Jan starts climbing back up the hill. She hears the boys laughing behind her, "She's mad, Tom."

At the top of the hill, Jan stops suddenly and looks back at them, angry.

"Why am I mad?"

Tom walks to her. "Because there isn't any house by the tree. There aren't any houses near here. The nearest house is Pauly's and that's half a mile down the road over there." Tom points back the way they just came. Now Jan laughs.

"I think you're mad because my house is just over…" Jan points through the trees to her house but there isn't any house. "…there!"

She doesn't understand. She looks around her to be sure she's in the right place. It looks right but everything is wrong. Her house's beautiful garden is a wild piece of land. And the place where her house stood is empty.

"What's happening to me?" Jan says, "Where's my house?"

"I'm sorry. I have to go home," Tom says.

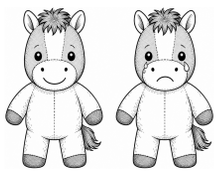

"Don't go, Tom, I have no place to go."

"Really? Then come with me. You can stay at my house tonight."

56. What is Jan's time capsule?
57. Which boy is Tom?
58. How does Jan feel when she hears the boys laughing behind her?
59. Why do the boys think Jan is mad?
60. What may Jan do at last?

I was standing in front of an old wooden building, and my friend said, “Check it out! It has no nails (钉子).” I took a closer look and was really surprised. “How on earth does this stay together?” I thought.

The “trick” is called sunmao. This is an ancient technique (技术) with a history of about 7,000 years. The oldest sunmao parts turned up at the Hemudu site (河姆渡遗址) in Yuyao, Zhejiang.

How does sunmao work? It looks simple: two pieces of wood are shaped, so one slides (滑动) into the other. But sunmao structures are super strong! In fact, many of them are even stronger than those with metal bolts (金属螺栓). Shanxi’s Pagoda of Fogong Temple (应县木塔) is a shining example. It has been through over 40 earthquakes and 200 bombardments (轰炸) in 900 years! Today, it’s still the oldest and tallest multi-storey wooden structure in the world.

Throughout its history, craftsmen have produced more than a hundred styles of sunmao. There is also a whole set of methods, such as how to measure (测量) wooden parts and how to put them together.

But is sunmao a thing of the past? Of course not, and it’s still alive and well. There are some modern uses of sunmao today. For example, some phone cases (手机壳) borrow the trick, which allows users to take them apart with ease. Packaging (包装) designs do it too, so we can use less plastic and tape. Rocket design uses sunmao-style parts to prevent heat damage during flight and scientists are even considering using sunmao to build a lunar base (基地).

29. Why does the writer mention (提及) the Pagoda of Fogong Temple?

A. To show the beauty of ancient Chinese wooden structures.

B. To show the strength and long life of sunmao structures.

C. To explain how sunmao survived earthquakes and wars.

D. To explain it is the greatest wooden building in history.

30. Which of the following statements is TRUE?

A. Sunmao structures use glue instead of nails in building.

B. Sunmao structures have no place in today’s technology.

C. Some sunmao structures are stronger than metal ones.

D. There are fewer than a hundred types of sunmao styles.

31. Which of the following is NOT a modern use of sunmao?

A. Making wooden houses much stronger.　　B. Designing packaging with less plastic.

C. Making phone cases easy to take apart.　　D. Preventing heat damage for the rockets.

32. We can read this passage in the _____ part of a magazine.

A. travel　　B. sports　　C. nature　　D. science

C

①Before each exam season, all you can think about for days is studying, preparing, and trying to get the best scores. Even after the exams, some new worries seem to pop (突然出现) into your mind. You may wonder, “Did I write that correctly? Why did I even waste time on that question?”

②But this stressful (有压力的) exam period also teaches you important life lessons. Check out what these lessons are, and keep them in mind. They are more important than exams and will last a lifetime. Time management (管理) is the first lesson you can learn. Before exams, you plan hours for each subject — sometimes even giving up fun activities or gatherings to study. This helps you learn not only how to use time wisely, but also how to stick to your timetable.

③Resilience is the second lesson that exams give you. There are moments you want to give up when you prepare for your exams, but you push through and keep trying. That's resilience: the strength to face difficulties without giving up, even when things are quite hard.

④Finally, exams build self-awareness (自我意识). You have to stay calm when surprises happen — like unexpected (意外的) questions or lower grades. Exams help you know yourself better — how you study, what motivates (激励) you, and what holds you back. The awareness is the first step towards growth.

⑤So next time exams get you down, remember: they are not just about grades. Every exam is secretly training you for bigger challenges ahead.

33. What does the writer tell us in paragraph 1?

A. Students often feel worried before and after exams.

B. Students should take all exams with great attention.

C. Students can learn life lessons during exam seasons.

D. Students should forget exams after they are finished.

34. What does the underlined word "Resilience" mean?

A. Studying very hard without taking breaks.

B. The awareness of one's own problems.

C. The ability to learn new different skills quickly.

D. The strength of facing and going through hard times.

35. What can't students learn when they prepare for exams according to the passage?

A. Managing time properly.　　B. Building a stronger will.

C. Ability to work with others.　　D. Knowing yourself better.

36. Which of the following shows the right structure of the passage?

A. ①②/③④/⑤　　B. ①/②③④/⑤

C. ①/②③/④⑤　　D. ①②③/④/⑤

D

I was pleased at having run away from Long John Silver. Suddenly, I heard some men talking close by. The voices got closer and I recognized (识别) Silver's voice, so I hid. I listened to Silver and the other man, Tom, talking.

"Silver," said Tom, "I will not join the mutiny (叛乱). I cannot." They were interrupted (打断) by a scream. "What was that?" asked Tom in great fear.

"That was Alan," answered Silver. "Have you killed Alan?" cried Tom, "Kill me too!"

Tom turned his back on Silver and walked towards the beach. But Silver threw a branch (树枝) at him. Tom fell face down on the ground. Then Silver stabbed (刺) him twice with his knife. Two honest men were now dead because of Silver.

I moved away quickly and quietly. I arrived at the bottom of a hill. I saw a figure moving quickly from tree to tree. My heart beat fast. It was getting closer to me. I felt afraid.

"Who are you?" I asked.

"I am poor Ben Gunn," he answered. "I was left on this island three years ago."

He asked my name and the ship I was on. "Is that Flint's ship, Jim?" he asked.

"No, Flint's dead," I answered. "But some of his crew (船员) are here, sadly."

"Not a man with one leg?" he asked in a tremulous voice, with his pale face and scared eyes.

"Silver?" I asked. "Yes, he's the cook and their leader."

I explained the whole situation to him.

"You're a good boy, Jim," he said. "I have made a boat, and I keep it by some white rocks near the beach. I was on Flint's ship with Billy Bones and Long John Silver. Flint came to this island with six strong sailors (水手) to bury (埋) his treasure, but when he returned, he himself was alone, and the six all died. It was a battle (战斗) and a sudden death — him against six."

—Adapted from Treasure Island

37. What does the underlined word "it" refer (指代) to in paragraph 5?

A. my heart　　B. a figure　　C. one tree　　D. a stone

38. The underlined word "tremulous" means _____ .

A. shaking with fear　　B. loud and clear

C. angry and strong　　D. deep and calm

39. Why did Flint come back alone after burying the treasure?

A. He shared the treasure with the six sailors.　　B. He left the six sailors to protect the treasure.

C. He lost his way and couldn't find them.　　D. He killed the six sailors during a battle.

40. From the passage, we can know _____ .

A. Flint is the man with one leg on the island.

B. Ben Gunn already met Jim before they talked.

C. Silver killed Tom with a knife after their talk.

D. Ben Gunn made a boat and hid it behind the island.

六、阅读表达（共5小题；每小题2分，满分10分）

Last month, I decided to buy a second-hand bike on an online second-hand trading platform (平台). After searching online for a long time, I finally found a bike. The pictures showed it in good condition, and the price was very low. The seller said that it had no big problems.

When I met the seller, I checked the bike. It looked pretty good. However, as I took it for a short test ride, I found that the brakes (刹车) didn't seem to work properly. The seller told me that it could be easily fixed. Finally, I decided to buy it.

On my way home, I took the bike to a local bike shop to get it fixed. The repairman told me that even if the brake problem wasn't big, it would still cost me some money to fix it. This cost made me realize that buying second-hand things may not always be as cheap as I thought.

My experience of buying a second-hand bike was a mixed one. On the positive side, it offered the chance to own a special thing at a lower price. On the negative (消极的) side, the quality problems and unexpected (意料之外的) costs were also things I had to face.

Please answer the following questions with no more than 15 words.

66. Where did the writer decide to buy a second-hand bike?

67. What problem did the writer find with the bike?

68. What did the writer do on his way home?

69. What was the positive side of this second-hand bike buying experience?

70. Would you like to buy second-hand things? Why or why not?

Comic books are often not allowed in class, but students at Beijing New Oriental Foreign Language School at Yangzhou, Jiangsu, get to enjoy them in their comic class.

"Comics are not just fun with no real value," said the class teacher, Hu Xinlei, who has taught comics for 20 years. "Many of them carry deep ideas." In class, students read classic Chinese and foreign comics such as Father and Son and Winter of Three Hairs (《三毛流浪记》). But the class is not only about reading. With the teacher's help, students learn to look at comics from different angles (角度). They study the basic features and forms of comics and find out the deeper meanings behind each story.

Besides character design and storytelling, students also learn many drawing skills. One of the most interesting ones is called "allusion (用典)"."We often get ideas from classic comics to create new stories," said 16-year-old Hu Shiyuan. "It's very interesting to find connections between the past and the present." Hu once told the story Sima Guang and the Water Jar (《司马光砸缸》) in a new way. In her comic, Sima needs a stone right away to break the jar and save the person, but someone is sitting on the only stone and won't move. Hu used this image (形象) to satirize (讽刺) people who refuse to give up their seats to others.

For the students, the class is more than an art class. "I used to think comics were just about drawing cartoon characters, but now they have become a powerful tool to share my thoughts, "said 15-year-old He Liyan ."I hope to create more interesting works in the future."

24. How does the writer lead in the topic?

A. By telling a fact.
B. By asking a question.
C. By expressing one's ideas.
D. By sharing a personal story.

25. What does "this image" refer to (指代) in Paragraph 3?

A. The water jar with a person inside.
B. Sima Guang breaking the jar quickly.
C. A person helping Sima Guang find a stone.
D. Someone sitting on the only stone and not moving.

26. Which of the following is true according to the article?

A. The comic class focuses on how to improve drawing skills.
B. The teacher believes comics are for fun with no deep meaning.
C. One student used a classic story to show problems with unhelpful people.
D. Students read foreign comics but do not read any Chinese comics in class.

27. What is the article mainly about?

A. How students learn to draw funny characters in comic classes.
B. The life story of a comic teacher who has taught for twenty years.
C. The history and development of comic books in Chinese schools.
D. A special class teaching students to express ideas through comics.

You might find that everything you see or hear on the Internet makes you more sure of what you already think. If this happens, be careful! You might be in something called an information cocoon (茧房)——a place where your own ideas keep coming back to you.

This isn't something new. Think about ancient times when people sat around a campfire. They only shared stories that their group believed and agreed with. Today, the Internet and social media are like our modern campfire. They connect people all over the world. But just like the old campfire, they also let people share and hear the ideas they already like. ①

You might have noticed that social media ads seem to know what you like. This happens because of a computer program called algorithms (算法). Algorithms are like sets of rules that help computers do things. Every time you click (点击) likes or share something, you leave a "digital footprint (数字脚印)". This helps algorithms learn what you like. Then they show you more of the same kind of content (内容). ②

Information cocoons can make you feel good, but they also have some bad results. ③

When you only see similar opinions, it's hard to accept different views. This can make it hard for us to understand people who think differently.

Information cocoons can also lead to more arguments (争论) and worries among people. This often makes different groups in society disagree with or do not trust each other even more. ④

The good news is that there are ways to break out of the information cocoon. One important thing is to look for different kinds of information. Also, it's important to learn how to think critically (批判地). This means checking the facts and being open to changing your mind.

By doing these things, you can break out of the information cocoon and see a wider world!

28. Why does the writer talk about “ancient campfire” in Paragraph 2?

A. To encourage people to spend much more free time outdoors.

B. To show that people always like sharing similar ideas in groups.

C. To suggest that technology has made talking with others worse.

D. To show why life in the past was more interesting than it is today.

29. According to the passage, a “digital footprint” is _____.

A. a fun thing to play on the Internet

B. something secret in your computer

C. a number you use to enter a website

D. a record of what you click or share online

30. We can put the sentence “This is why we need to solve this problem.” in _____.

A. ①　　B. ②　　C. ③　　D. ④

31. What does the writer think of the information cocoon?

A. It is not good or bad, just a fact.

B. It is hard to tell if it is good or bad.

C. It is a problem and we should try to break it.

D. It is good because it makes people feel happy.

D

What memories do you have of your grandparents? How do you keep the memories of your loved ones?

On my 56th birthday, my daughter Beth gave me two beautiful wooden butterflies. I hung them on the wall so that I could admire (钦佩) them all day. They carried our memories.

My mum passed away when I was 25, and Beth was just a baby. She never got to meet her grandma, which made it hard for me to keep my mum's memory alive for Beth. One day, when Beth was 7, we were playing outside, and she suddenly said how much she wished she could meet her grandma.

I told her that her grandma loved her very much and that she was watching over her from heaven (天堂). I even said that maybe she was taking a ride on the back of a butterfly to get a closer look. At that moment, a butterfly just showed up out of nowhere, flew around Beth’s face, and then flew away. We both laughed happily.

Since then it seems like butterflies follow us wherever we go. Whenever we are outside, they come down, circle us, take a good look and fly away. It feels like my mum’s love is still watching over us through the butterflies. Even in winter, I can take comfort in looking at the wooden butterflies that Beth gave me and think of my mum’s love.

The wooden butterflies have become a symbol of our bond (纽带). They remind us of the moment when a butterfly brought us together and filled our hearts with happiness. And even now, they continue (继续) bringing us closer to the woman who holds a special place in our hearts.

32. Why does the writer ask two questions in paragraph 1?

A. To give advice on keeping memories.

B. To make the readers interested in the topic.

C. To see if her feelings are the same as the reader’s.

D. To show she has no memories of her grandparents.

33. The underlined word “circle” in Paragraph 5 means “_____”.

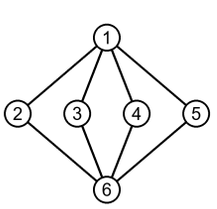

A. sit on

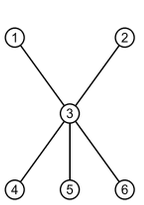

B. fly around

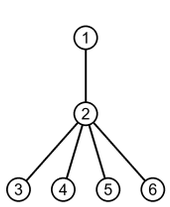

C. look at

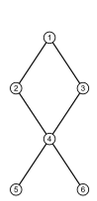

D. follow slowly

34. Which of the following best shows the structure (结构) of the passage?

A.

B.

C.

D.

35. Which of the following is the best title for the passage?

A. The Life of a Grandmother　　B. Butterflies: Insects of Beauty

C. A Birthday Gift from Daughter　　D. Love That Flies on Butterfly Wings

China is making big efforts to help people control their weight and live healthier lives. The government has started a three-year "Weight Management Year" plan from 2024 to 2027 to fight against obesity (肥胖). Obesity can cause serious health problems. ____36____

First, it's important to check your BMI (Body Mass Index). For adults, a healthy BMI is between 18.5 and 24. ____37____ A BMI of 28 or more means you are obese. Also, doctors suggest measuring your waist (腰围). Men should keep their waist under 90 cm, and women under 85 cm.

Eating well is very important, and exercise is just as important! When it comes to food,choose whole grains like brown rice, fresh vegetables, and lean proteins (瘦蛋白) such as fish, chicken, or beans. ____38____

For exercise, try to do 150-300 minutes of activities like walking, cycling, or dancing every week, and do strength exercises twice a week. ____39____

____40____ Teenagers should sleep 7 hours every night because bad sleep can make them put on weight. Try to eat vegetables first, then meat, and finally rice or bread during a meal to control how much you eat.

Remember, losing weight isn't about being perfect—just start with small changes, like drinking water instead of soda or taking the stairs instead of the elevator. With these easy steps, everyone can have a healthier future.

A. If your BMI is between 24 and 28, you are overweight.

B. Here are some important suggestions that you should know.

C. For example, you can join a sports club to make more friends.

D. Don't eat too many candies and sweet cakes, and also eat less salty food.

E. Small daily habits can also make a big difference, not just diet and exercise.

F. Get up and move around for a few minutes every hour during long study time.

六、阅读与回答问题(本题共5小题；每小题2分，满分10分)

请认真阅读下面短文，并根据短文内容回答问题。

Do you notice that students spend the same amount of time in class, but some get better grades than others? In some ways, it's because they are different listeners. When having classes, some of them listen carefully. We call them effective (有效的) listeners. Some just daydream or talk to others. They are ineffective listeners.

How are some listeners effective? First of all, they don't care about some poor situations, like an uncomfortable seat or a personal problem. They say "No" to anything that will stop them from understanding and remembering. After leaving a class or meeting, they remember what the speakers said, not the room conditions or the speaker's accent (口音).

Effective listeners always pay attention to the message itself. They try not to be influenced (被影响) by their own feelings or ideas. They do not decide if the thing is boring, too easy, or too difficult before listening. They like getting the challenge of new ideas. To help remember difficult ideas, they also write down important words and phrases.

However, ineffective listeners often daydream. They don't like to hear what they don't agree with. They are often so busy taking notes that they miss the speaker's main idea. These listeners leave a speech or a class with a notebook full of words, but the notebook means nothing.

Do you wish to do well in your study? Start to be an effective listener. It may help.

(请将答案写在答题卡上)

62. What do effective listeners do in class?

63.What do effective listeners write down to help remember difficult ideas?

64. What do effective listeners say “No” to?

65. Why do ineffective listeners sometimes miss the speaker’s main idea?

66. How do you make yourself be an effective listener? (请自拟一句话作答)

三、阅读理解(本题共20小题；满分35分)

第一节(本题共15小题；每小题2分，满分30分)

认真阅读下列短文，从短文后各题所给的A、B、C、D四个选项中，选出最佳选项，并在答题卡上将该项涂黑。

A

Long ago, before clocks were invented, people used simple things from daily life to know how much time passed. Let's explore some!

	An incense (香) stick The most common way to measure (测量) time in ancient China was by burning incense sticks, called "一炷香" in Chinese. It worked day and night and was easy to carry and simple to make. An incense stick usually took about half an hour to burn.
	A cup of tea "一盏茶" was about 15 minutes long. The teacup came with a lid (盖子) and a small plate. The time it took for a cup of tea to be served and cooled down changed with the weather. In summer, cooling the tea took about 15 minutes, while in winter, it was faster — sometimes just 10 minutes.
	A pot of wine Finishing a pot of wine took about one shichen, which equated (等同于) two hours in modern times.
	A meal A meal was about half a shichen long. But in modern times, people usually spend around half an hour for a meal.

26. What's the most common way to measure time in ancient China?

A. An incense stick. B. A cup of tea. C. A pot of wine. D. A meal.

27. "A pot of wine" was about _____.

A. 10-15 minutes B. half an hour C. 2 hours D. 2 shichen

28. What's the passage mainly about?

A. Why ancient Chinese invented clocks with daily objects.

B. How ancient Chinese measured time with four daily things.

C. Why ancient Chinese used four daily simple things to tell time.

D. How ancient Chinese used different things to spend their free time.

Although I did not speak or understand English, I was still excited about going to school for the first time.

On my first day of school, my teacher, Miss Scalapino seated me closest to the window. Right next to my desk was a caterpillar (毛虫) in a large glass bottle. It moved very slowly without making any sound. Just in front of the caterpillar was a picture book of caterpillars and butterflies. I went through it, page by page, studying all the pictures.

When the bell rang, all the kids walked in quietly. Some of them looked at me. Embarrassed and nervous, I looked at the caterpillar in the bottle. I did this every time someone looked at me. In class, I did not understand a word Miss Scalapino was saying. The more she spoke, the uneasier I felt. For days I got headaches from trying to listen. Luckily, the caterpillar brought me some comfort. During breaks, I often stayed with it and fed it with leaves from trees on the playground.

My favourite time in school was when we did art. I drew butterflies in pencil and then colored them using every color in my crayon box. Miss Scalapino even put one of my drawings up on the board for everyone to see. After a few weeks, it was gone and I did not know how to ask where it was.

One day after classes I looked for the caterpillar but could not see it. I put my hand in the bottle and lightly moved the leaves. To my surprise, the caterpillar had turned into a cocoon (茧).

On Wednesday, May 23, just a few days before the end of the school year, Miss Scalapino surprised me. She handed me the missing drawing of the butterfly and a silk blue ribbon with words " 1st PLACE" in gold on it . I won the first prize for my drawing! I was so proud that I felt like bursting out of my skin.

That afternoon, I checked on the caterpillar. I was amazed to find a butterfly moving from its cocoon slowly. I opened the bottle. Magically, the butterfly came out, fluttering (振翅) in the air, ready for a completely new life.

29. How did the writer feel in Miss Scalapino's first class?

A. Cheerful.　　B. Proud.

C. Uncomfortable.　　D. Surprised.

30. How did Miss Scalapino surprise the writer?

A. She took away his favourite drawing.　　B. She put his drawing up on the board.

C. She gave him the caterpillar in a bottle.　　D. She handed him his drawing and a ribbon.

31. Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

A. The writer went through the pages of the book to study all the words.

B. The writer won the first prize for his drawing of the butterfly.

C. The writer always stayed with his teacher during breaks.

D. The writer spoke English very well on the first day of school.

32. The butterfly fluttering in the air could probably make the writer feel that _____ .

A. they would both stay unnoticed by others　　B. he could have a new start in his life as well

C. he should use more colors to draw butterflies　　D. they could spend a lot more time together later

"I am not out of place. I am where I am at home." says a German doctor Joel Mikael Walker, after performing acupuncture (针灸) on a patient in Zhengzhou, China. Some locals are amazed by receiving traditional Chinese medicine (TCM) from a foreigner, but Walker is sure about what he is doing. He is among a growing number of foreigners taking part in TCM, mixing their Western backgrounds with ancient Chinese healing arts (中医诊疗).

Walker, from Germany, came to China in 2015 and fell in love with Chinese kung fu. While learning Shaolin kung fu in Henan, he became curious about Chinese culture and medicine. After a year of Chinese study, he signed up in Henan University of Chinese Medicine. Since he learned acupuncture, he has treated over a thousand patients. "He is skilled in acupuncture," says his teacher, Professor Yu Dongdong, "He can work on his own."

Under his Chinese name "Wuming", Walker has become an online hit on the video-sharing platform Douyin, gathering over one million followers. As a famous person on the Internet, he shares local culture in smooth Henan dialect (方言). "You have a more real-to-life grasp of Henan dialect than I do," comments one follower. Many people like him because he joins in local culture. He also treated his grandmother's health problems with acupuncture, improving her condition greatly.

With more and more fans, Walker feels a sense of responsibility (责任). "Posting videos was just for fun before, but now I want to take part in more meaningful projects," he says. He plans to create videos promoting TCM and sharing stories of ancient Chinese medical experts. "I really want more people to know about TCM and its far-reaching cultural value," he adds. Whether in China or Germany, he plans to keep working on TCM. "I will do anything to help people through TCM."

33. What can we learn from Walker's words in Para. 1?

A. He is curious about doing acupuncture.　　B. He is proud of his foreign background.

C. He is unwilling to treat the locals with TCM.　　D. He is comfortable with the present situation.

34. Why did Walker decide to study TCM?

A. His teacher advised him to learn it.

B. He decided to introduce TCM to Germany.

C. He wanted to become famous on the Internet.

D. He got the idea while learning Chinese kung fu.

35. What does Para. 3 mainly talk about?

A. How Walker learned the Henan dialect.
B. Why Walker has many online followers.
C. How Walker helps his family with TCM.
D. Why Walker finds it hard to make videos.

36. What is the author's purpose in writing this text?

A. To show the importance of TCM in education.
B. To introduce a special person working on TCM.
C. To explain how TCM can help people in China.
D. To encourage the use of dialects in promoting TCM.

D

Scientists have long known dolphins are among the smartest ocean animals. However, a recent study in the Gulf of Mexico shows their communication might be as hard as human language. Scientists found that each dolphin develops an individual "signature whistle (标志性口哨)" to call each other, much like how people use names.

To test this, the team played underwater recordings of different dolphin whistles. When a dolphin heard its family's special sound, it quickly swam toward the speaker. _____ This proved these sounds act like personal IDs. The study also found dolphins mix whistles in creative ways to share messages, such as warning about danger or pointing out food locations.

Interestingly, baby dolphins spend months practicing these sounds, just like human babies learning to talk. This suggests adult dolphins actively teach their young, an unusual behavior in the animal world. Scientists say this finding helps us understand how intelligence (智力) develops in different species.

Sea biologists believe studying dolphin language could support conservation (保护) efforts. For example, knowing how dolphins communicate about dangers might help protect them from ocean pollution or ship noises. Already, some teams are using AI tools to decode dolphin sounds in real time. These AI tools can explain the meaning of the sounds. In this way, humans could better watch dolphin health and create safer sea environments.

This study not only deepens our love for dolphins' intelligence but also reminds us to protect these amazing animals and their underwater home.

37. What did dolphins do when hearing their family's whistle?

A. They swam away quickly.
B. They repeated the same sound.
C. They moved toward the sound.
D. They warned others of danger.

38. Which of the following can be put in "_____" in Para. 2?

A. However, it copied unknown sounds like "Hello".
B. However it ate fish happily when hearing strange calls.
C. However, it swam faster when boats made loud engine sounds.
D. However, it paid no attention to whistles from unknown groups.

39. What does the underlined word "decode" in Par. 4 most probably mean?

A. Design.　　B. Translate.　　C. Predict.　　D. Hear.

40. What is the best title for the passage?

A. Saving Dolphins in the Ocean.
B. Baby Dolphins' Learning Journey.
C. How AI Helps Marine Research.
D. The Amazing Whistle Language.

China has recently introduced a national childcare subsidy system (育儿补贴系统) to support families in raising young children. ___41___

The subsidy program started on January 1, 2025. ___42___ Whether it's the first, second, or third child, as long as (只要) the child is under 3 years old, the family is suitable for the subsidy.

The national standard (标准) is 3,600 yuan per child every year. ___43___ For example, if a family has a 1-year-old child, they can receive 3,600 yuan for that year. Even for children born before 2025 but still under 3, the subsidy will be worked out according to the remaining months until they reach 3 years old. This ensures that families receive the subsidy on time according to their child's age.

Parents or guardians can apply (申请) for the subsidy in two ways. ___44___ It is very convenient and fast. They can also choose to apply in person at relevant local departments. When applying, they need to prepare simple materials such as the child's birth certificate and household registration booklet.

___45___ It shows that the government cares about families and is making efforts to share the financial burden of raising children. This policy (政策) is expected to bring more support and hope to families with young children.

A. The subsidy standard is clear.

B. Here are some key points about the policy.

C. It will be given until the child turns 3 years old.

D. Only families living in big cities can enjoy this subsidy.

E. They can use the online childcare subsidy information system.

F. This new childcare subsidy policy is really great news for families.

G. Families can apply with paper if their child meets the requirement.

What helps a garden grow well? Sunlight and water, of course. But guess what? Music might help plants grow better, too.

Plants ____46____ (not hear) sounds as humans do, but they can feel movements from sounds. A study showed that when plants listen to music, they grow faster, with larger flowers, and healthier ____47____ (leaf). Singing can also encourage healthy plants by adding CO_2, just as the King of the UK does! King Charles talks to his plants to help with their growth. He even once jokingly asked Katy Perry, a famous singer, ____48____ (sing) to his plants.

Then, which kind of music do plants like ____49____ (well)? Chris Beardshaw, an experienced gardener, thinks heavy metal music (重金属音乐), like Black Sabbath, helps plants grow. While he ____50____ (do) an experiment, he found that classical (古典的) music made plants grow a little better, but rock and roll singer Cliff Richard's music led to plants dying. Heavy metal music was ____51____ (help) for plants than other kinds of music. So far scientists ____52____ (do) many experiments to learn about plants and music.

However, it's hard to know what music plants really like. The kind of plants and where they grow are also of great ____53____ (important). Maybe the plants just get better care when people play music for them.

It is not important whether plants like music or not. You just enjoy ____54____ (you) while playing music for plants. Music can make you more patient when caring for plants. So, ____55____ (play) some Mozart or Metallica and see if your plants grow better. You'll have a great time, too.

Life-like robots, including an Albert Einstein robot, went for sale in Beijing, China recently.

A new robot store has opened in Beijing selling humanoid robots (人形机器人). These robots can be home helpers, cooks, or copies (复制品) of famous scientists. According to a report, the store is the first of its kind in the East Asian country to sell humanoid robots for everyday use. The store is located next to a robot-themed restaurant where robots cook and serve food.

The store boss Wang Yifan said, “If we want robots to go into many homes, just robot companies can’t do it alone.” Many of the companies have no experience in sales and there are few chances to show their products, he added. The store allows visitors to touch and play with many different robots from chess players to dogs. The humanoid robots are priced between 2,000 yuan and over a million yuan.

China is one of the top countries in robot technology. This year, the government plans to give one trillion yuan to help new robot and AI companies grow.

The store opened during the World Robot Conference (会议) in Beijing in August. This event ran for five days. More than 200 companies from China and other countries showed 1,500 robot products.

China also hosted the world’s first Humanoid Robot Games in Beijing from August 15th to August 17th.

Lee got there and found the building was on fire. This fire would become the city's most ____12____ and deadly one. At least 159 people died, and seven tall buildings burned for over 40 hours.

The 43-year-old engineer stayed with other neighbours at a nearby school. She waited for news. ____13____ the fire grew bigger, a local officer told her they had to stop looking for pets. Just when she thought she ____14____ Jason, a fireman called her to ask if she had a dog in Flat 2703.

A day after the fire started, Jason came back. A volunteer carried him out in his arms. "Jason was still ____15____ in fear when I saw him," Lee said. "I called his name and he saw me and stopped. Then he smiled. Happiness flooded over me. I couldn't stop smiling." Later, she wrote online to thank firemen ____16____ "saving my heart".

During the fire, the local websites had many posts for help from ____17____ pet owners. In this busy city, people treat pets like family members. Animal groups shared ____18____ of saved animals to find their owners. Also, Lee ____19____ the government to offer pet-friendly houses. She said it was hard for families who lost their homes to keep their animals.

It was reported that 209 animals were saved from the fire, but 63 died. ____20____ Jason was going to be all right. An animal doctor checked him and said there was nothing serious with him, and he was back to his fluffy, lively self.

Summer birds that's what we are
We fly near and we fly far
Robins, cardinals, doves, and jays
We hope we brighten all your days
We build our homes in trees so strong
We sit and sing our happy song
Our little ones arrive really soon
Again, we will sing a happy tune
Daddy bird sits on the gate
While baby birds sit and ▲
Mommy is off to find some food
Maybe she'll find them in the woods
It's time for babies to leave the nest
And give it all their very best
They now learn to jump and fly
As they head toward the big blue sky

C

No noisy cars, no smoky kitchens, no sad wild animals—sounds nice, right? These aren't just dreams: the Netherlands, Mexico, and Ecuador made them real. Let's see how.

The Netherlands

In the 1970s, Groningen faced serious traffic problems because of too many cars in the city centre. The local government took away the motorway and replaced (取代) it with green spaces, areas for walking, paths for cycles and buses. Cars can't park in the market square and enter the city centre.

Today, 61% of trips in the city are done by bicycle. The city centre is full of places for bikes to park and most buildings have bicycle parks. As a result, today Groningen has got the cleanest air of any big Dutch city.

Mexico

In many countries, people still cook and warm their homes using open fires, which cause health problems because of smoke and gas. The Patsari stove, developed in Mexico, uses less wood and makes indoor air better. It has a chimney (烟囱) that takes smoke outside.

Health studies show that families with this stove get 30% fewer lung infections (感染) and 50% fewer eye infections.

Ecuador

The Bigal River Nature Park, between the Amazon and the Andes, is home to different animals and birds. However, human activity has a negative effect on the wildlife there. Many animals and birds are in danger because the forests are getting smaller and people hunt them. To show people how wonderful the nature park is, the Sumac Muyu Foundation set up camera traps (野生动物监测相机) in 2014. They take videos of animals and study the changes in their activities. The videos can help stop new building projects in the nature park.

In conclusion, different places around the world are taking creative local actions to solve their own environmental problems.

27. How did Groningen solve its traffic problem?

A. By producing fewer cars.
B. By encouraging green trips.
C. By adding more car parks.
D. By building new motorways.

28. Why did people in Mexico develop the Patsari stove?

A. To cook food more easily.
B. To stop fires from happening.
C. To reduce wood use and improve air.
D. To provide heating during cold seasons.

29. What does the underlined word "negative" probably mean?

A. weak
B. terrible
C. great
D. helpful

30. Which can be another example of this passage?

A. India built 50 new hospitals each year.
B. France added 20 train lines between cities.
C. China developed over 100 waste-free cities.
D. South Africa gave free textbooks to students.

D

I joined the Teach For Bangladesh programme in 2023. Everything was going well until an unusual summer came. The sudden heat and repeated power cuts stopped many students coming to school. Those who came felt tired and uncomfortable but didn't know why. They didn't know about climate change. That's when I realized we needed climate education.

Luckily, Teach For Bangladesh provided me with the tools and materials to bring climate education into my classroom. I began adding climate topics to my lessons. My students then did fun and hands-on activities, such as growing plants to cool the classroom and changing plastic bottles into bird feeders, so that they could learn about climate effects on all living things.

One of the most memorable (难忘的) activities was our nature art competition. Using leaves, flowers and clay, students created amazing handicrafts to show the natural beauty we're trying to protect. They also designed climate posters and shared them with communities, spreading the importance of green living. They also taught the younger students about climate change and what to do. "We want to connect with nature more and do something for our climate," shared one student.

Although my role as a teacher ended in 2024, our climate actions live on. My students still keep green habits in their daily lives, like collecting rainwater and turning off lights and fans when leaving a room to save water and energy. It is exciting to see how small actions can slowly change many people and help everyone in our school and community care more about the environment.

Climate change is not far away—it is here, and it is changing our children's future. What steps will you take today to support your students and communities to fight climate change? Let's act now, before it's too late.

31. What was the writer's role in the programme?

A. A student.
B. A teacher.
C. A designer.
D. A manager.

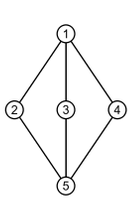

32. Why did the writer start climate education?

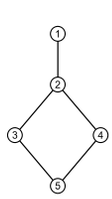

A. To sell tools and materials.
B. To learn how to go green.
C. To hold a nature art competition.
D. To help students understand climate change.

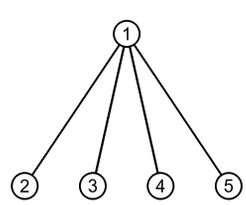

33. What did students do in climate lessons?

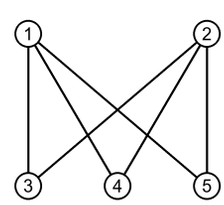

A. They created handicrafts for communities.
B. They discussed climate topics in all subjects.
C. They shared climate posters with younger students.
D. They learned climate effects through hands-on activities.

34. What's the structure of the passage?

A.

B.

C.

D.

35. Which of the following is the best title?

A. Green habits at school　　B. Fun handicrafts in class

C. Learning about climate, helping all　　D. Enjoying summer, feeling cool

五、阅读填空(共19小题;56—63每题1分，64题2分，65—74每题1分;满分20分)

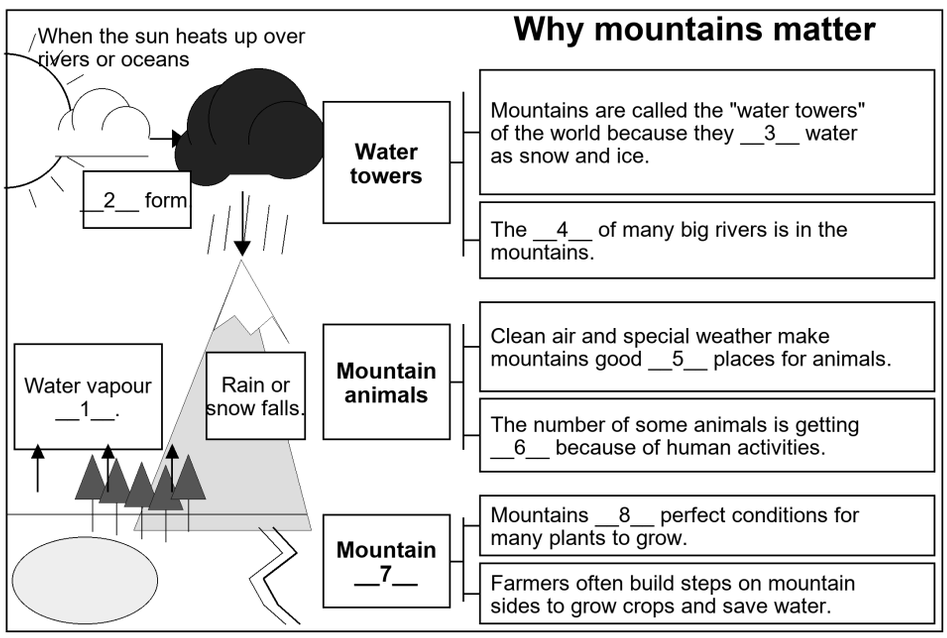

请认真阅读下列短文，根据所读内容在文章后图表中第56—63题的空格，并回答第64题。

Mountains are very important to both nature and people. One main reason is that mountains provide fresh water. Water moves in a cycle. When the sun heats water in rivers and oceans, it becomes water vapour (水蒸气) and goes up into the air. When the air becomes cool, the water vapour changes into small drops and forms clouds. When the drops become heavy, they fall as rain or snow.

Mountains affect (影响) this water cycle. Because mountains are high, they push up the water vapour. As a result, a lot of rain and snow fall on mountains. Much of this water stays on the mountains as snow and ice. In spring, when the snow melts, the water flows down the mountains into streams and rivers. That is why mountains are called the "water towers" of the world. Many big rivers start in the mountains, such as the Yellow River and the Amazon River.

Mountains are also home to many animals. Some animals live only in mountain areas, like snow leopards in Asia. Mountains have clean air and special weather, so they are good places for animals to live. However, some animals are becoming rare. This is because people build more farms and roads in the mountains. They also use more water and wood. Animals now have less space to live and find food.

Mountains are important for farming, too. Many plants that people eat first grew in the mountains. For example, corn came from the mountains of Mexico. Tea and coffee grow best in cool mountain areas. Farmers often build steps on mountain sides to grow crops and keep water from running away. Because mountain valleys have rich soil (土壤) and plenty of water, they are good places for farming.

Just as the saying goes, "Life is like a box of chocolates. You never know what you're going to get." This is true not only of life but also of the blind boxes from the Henan Museum.

The museum catches visitors' eye with many kinds of archaeological (考古的) blind boxes. These blind boxes are popular because visitors can find replicas of cultural relics (文物复制品) by themselves.

If you want an archaeological blind box, you just need to spend about 60 yuan on it. Then you can dig and find your own treasure. The mystery boxes come in different sizes and shapes. Some are small and some are big. The museum's first blind boxes sold out very soon because many people were interested in them. And many visitors asked the museum to produce more.

However, the museum in Henan is not the only museum to sell archaeological blind boxes in China. The Shaanxi History Museum in Xi'an has made its own blind box models. And the blind boxes from the Sanxingdui Museum in Sichuan are popular with people too. Shanghai Museum has also launched its own archaeological blind boxes.

The museums are trying to tell ancient Chinese stories by producing creative products. It's a great way for young people to get to know about Chinese history and culture, too. If you're interested, come and get one!

29. How does the writer start the passage?

A. By giving an example.
B. By telling a story.
C. By introducing a saying.
D. By asking a question.

30. Why are the archaeological blind boxes popular?

A. Because they come in different sizes.
B. Because there are real treasures in them.
C. Because visitors can buy them for their family.
D. Because visitors can find replicas of cultural relics.

31. According to the passage, which of the following museums have started selling blind boxes?

①The Sanxingdui Museum ②The Henan Museum
③The Shaanxi History Museum ④The Shanghai Museum

A. ①②③　B. ①②④　C. ①③④　D. ①②③④

32. What is the best title for the passage?

A. The Differences Between Museums
B. The Ways to Produce Blind Boxes
C. The Blind Boxes in Chinese Museums
D. The History of the Henan Museum

Colin sat in his wheelchair (轮椅) in the secret garden. The sun was warm, and everything looked alive. He saw that Mary was now strong and her face was pink from working outside. She was not the weak girl she used to be.

Colin began to feel something new and strong inside himself. He saw a strong rose branch growing tall. "Mary! Dickon!" he suddenly shouted. "Watch me!"

They looked at him. Colin's face was red but serious. He moved the blanket off his legs. "I want to stand up," he said. He had never said this before. He was a little afraid, but he also felt a new power.

Dickon came over to help, but Colin stopped him. "No. I have to do it alone." He took a deep breath, held the chair tightly, and slowly moved his feet down. He was shaking. He sat for a moment, trying to be brave. Then, he used all his strength and pushed up. He was standing! He couldn't stand very well, and after a few seconds, he sat down again, breathing fast.

But he did it. A big, happy smile appeared on his face. "You did it! You did it!" Mary said hotly, almost jumping. "I said I could!" Colin answered, still breathing fast. "This is just the first time. I will become as strong as Dickon. I will live for a very, very long time!"

There was magic in the secret garden. It was not real magic. It was the strong feeling in a young boy who had been unhappy for too long.

—Adapted from The Secret Garden

33. What made Mary look strong and have a pink face?

A. Talking with Dickon every day.
B. Lying in the warm sun.
C. Playing all day in the secret garden.
D. Working outside in the garden.

34. Why did Colin stop Dickon from helping him stand up?

A. Because he wanted Mary to help.
B. Because he wanted to try it himself.
C. Because he was too afraid to get help.
D. Because he believed in the magic of the garden.

35. What does the underlined word "hotly" mean in Paragraph 5?

A. peacefully B. silently C. sadly D. excitedly

36. What does the passage mainly talk about?

A. Why Mary and Dickon worked in the garden.
B. How Colin became happy in the secret garden.
C. How Colin tried to stand up by himself in the garden.
D. What Mary and Dickon did to make the garden beautiful.

D

In spring, some people wear T-shirts while others are in coats. It seems that people feel different temperatures on the same day. Why does this happen?

In fact, people don't feel air temperature directly. There are sensors (传感器) on our skin that can feel cold, cool, warm, and hot temperatures. These sensors are also in our noses and bodies.

When bodies are the same size, how much body fat we have can be different and influence (影响) how we feel temperatures. The more body fat one has, the warmer he or she feels. This is because the fat under the skin helps keep heat, according to the website The Swaddle. For example, old people often feel colder than young people as the fat under the skin gets thinner with age.

Surprisingly, another reason is height. We need blood to move around our bodies to keep us warm. Since most people's hearts are about the same size, it takes more effort and time for the blood to move around in taller people. So taller people might feel colder, said the newsletter Mic.

Metabolism (新陈代谢) also influences how we feel temperatures. It shows how fast our bodies use energy. People with a higher metabolism always feel hotter than others. This is because they produce more heat and may take more time to cool down. For example, people with more muscles (肌肉) often feel warmer.

37. How do people feel air temperature?

A. With their nose.　　B. With their muscles.

C. With their body fat.　　D. With their body's different sensors.

38. Why do old people feel cold more easily?

A. Their bodies get smaller.　　B. They have thinner skin.

C. They have less fat under their skin.　　D. They have more fat under their skin.

39. According to the passage, who is most likely to feel cold?

A. A tall, thin person.　　B. A tall, fat person.

C. A short, thin person.　　D. A strong, muscular person.

40. What is the structure of the passage?

A. ①/②③④/⑤　　B. ①/②/③④⑤

C. ①②③④/⑤　　D. ①/②③④⑤

The oil paper umbrella is a traditional Chinese handicraft. It has a history of over 1,000 years in China. In the Tang dynasty, it was introduced to Japan, where it was called the "Tang Umbrella". 61 In Vietnam, Thailand and Laos, it has developed into different styles. However, the handmade oil paper umbrellas were less commonly used in daily life.

62 People there make umbrellas from skin paper (皮纸), bamboo and a coating of tung oil (桐油). It takes more than 70 steps to make an oil paper umbrella. Making bamboo ribs, pasting paper (糊纸) and painting patterns are the most important. 63

A young man called Liu Weixue learned the traditional art of making Yuhang oil paper umbrellas from his grandfather. "I want to bring the art to life," Liu said. 64 As the traditional paper was easy to break, he started using a kind of thicker paper. In a test, his umbrellas were opened and closed 1,000 times without breaking. He also used special bamboo to make the umbrellas lighter.

65 He goes to local schools to teach students. He also goes to events in different places to promote (推广) the art.

A. Now Liu hopes the art can be passed on.

B. They were turned into decorative artworks.

C. It takes at least a week to make an umbrella.

D. Many students are good at making Liu's umbrellas.

E. Later oil paper umbrellas spread to other Asian countries.

六、阅读表达（共5小题；每小题2分，满分10分；每个题目的答案不超过5个单词）

People have told stories about Robin Hood for over 700 years. Nobody knows if he was a real person or an invented character. In the story, Robin was quite smart and humorous.

Robin Hood was a young man, who was good at archery (射箭术). One day he was walking in Sherwood Forest. There he got into trouble with a group of men. Among them, he killed the cousin of the Sheriff (郡长) of Nottingham.

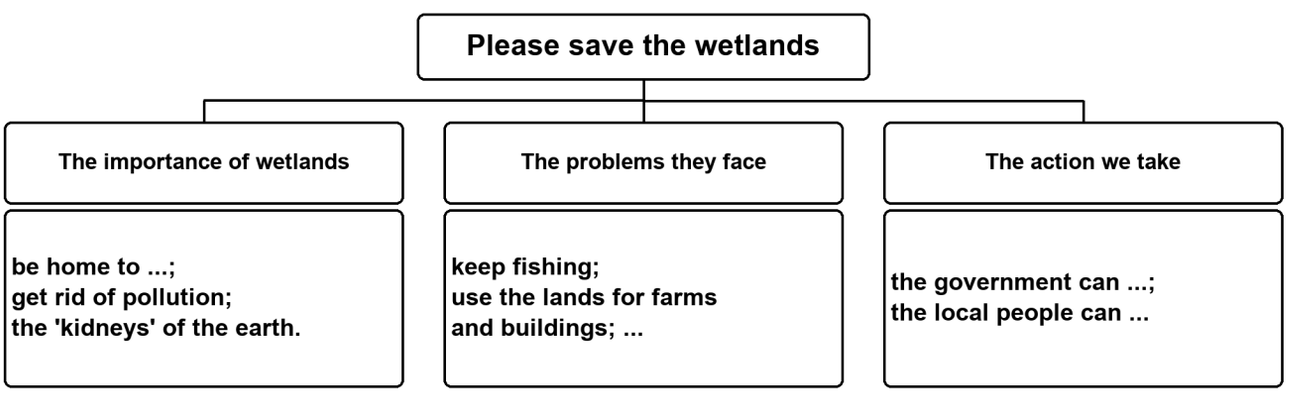

Robin became an outlaw(逃犯), and soon he became the leader of more than one hundred other outlaws. Robin and other outlaws always looked for rich people and asked them to their camp in Sherwood Forest. When they arrived, Robin gave them a treat and then he took their gold away to help the poor. Robin became most famous for "robbing from the rich and giving to the poor".

The Sheriff of Nottingham was Robin's greatest enemy and treated the poor badly. He hated Robin because Robin was an outlaw. But most of all, he hated Robin because Robin was so kind that everyone else loved him. The Sheriff of Nottingham kept trying to catch Robin Hood, but never succeeded.

66. What was Robin like according to the passage?
67. Where did Robin get into trouble with a group of men?
68. How many outlaws were with Robin?
69. Who did Robin help with the money robbed from the rich?
