Have you ever dreamed of visiting Iceland or Spain? Well, you can enjoy these amazing places without __11__ a lot. Places like Little Iceland and Little Spain of the theme parks in China look like the famous sights very much. They are clean, safe and comfortable. But there's just one __12__ —they're not real.

Real travel is more difficult. Now I'm walking in the countryside of Spain. Everything here is a little __13__. I feel like I'm on another planet. The heavy walls lean(倾斜) into the small streets, and you have to walk __14__ because they seem to fall down. And watch out for those cobblestone streets—they'll make you fall if you're not careful. __15__ these "problems" truly make the travelling real. Walking in the small streets and __16__ the heavy walls make me feel like going back in time. It seems that the centuries' old stones are __17__ the stories of the past to me. Every step shows something new and special. I think it's __18__ to have the same feelings and thoughts when visiting Little Spain in some theme parks.

While in the theme parks, the buildings, the history and the language all work together to fire up my imagination. They are what makes a place real. The wonderful mini places will give you an idea of __19__ the real places are like, just like photos do. But we all know that pictures can't tell the __20__ story, don't we? So if you want to know a place, with its stories and culture, nothing is as good as going there for real.

When you go to Australia, you can always hear something like this, "I am dead set against the plan!" What does the speaker mean by saying it? It's an Australian slang(俚语), which means the speaker doesn't agree with the plan strongly.

Australia is famous for its interesting and unusual slang. Even native English speakers visiting Australia can have trouble understanding the locals because of their accents(口音) and the expressions they use. But some Australian slang expressions are used all over the world.

Selfie

The popularity of social media and smartphones has made selfie a very common English word. In 2013, Oxford Dictionaries made it the "Word of the Year", and the USA has a National Selfie Day.

But selfie was a part of Australian English long before it became popular in other countries. The earliest known use was in 2002 when an Australian college student posted a photo that he had taken of himself online, calling it a selfie.

The student, Nathan Hope, told ABC News that he didn't make the word, but rather "it was just common slang in Australia at the time."

Stoked

To be stoked is to be really happy or pleased. For example, you might say "I'm stoked!" if you're excited about your holiday plans.

Along with other expressions, such as ripper, which means "very good" or "great", stoked was first used by Australians in the 1960s and 1970s.

No worries

"No worries" is a common reply to "thank you". For example, James, "Thanks for helping me." Jessica, "No worries."

So the next time someone thanks you, instead of "you're welcome", you can say "no worries" and they'll know that you're speaking Australian English.

(　　)24. How does the writer start the passage?

A. By listing numbers.　　B. By showing pictures.

C. By comparing(对比) facts.　　D. By asking a question.

(　　)25. What does the underlined word "stoked" mean in Paragraph 6?

A. Excited.　　B. Surprised.　　C. Interested.　　D. Worried.

(　　)26. Your football team won last Friday. What would your Australian friend say to you?

A. No selfies.　　B. You little ripper.

C. No worries.　　D. Dead set against the team.

C

If you have a big "bucket list" of places you have always wanted to see, choosing a holiday place might be easy. However, sometimes you might feel like you need a vacation, but have no idea where to go. There are more choices than ever before. So how do you decide on just one place? To help you with this, think about the following things.

The first thing is probably the most important. That is how much you want to spend. It will decide what sort of trip to go on. You will also need to think about what you want from your holiday. Do you want to rest and do as little as possible, perhaps by a pool or on a beach? Or would you like to do outdoor activities, or go sightseeing?

Weather is also another important factor(因素). For example, you may not want to do a lot of sightseeing in the south of Europe in the middle of summer because it's very hot! How much time you have for a holiday is also important, especially when you're travelling a long way. If you have two weeks away from work, you may not want to spend four of the days travelling or dealing with jet lag(时差)!

And think about your accommodation(住宿). Do you need a place that offers food, or are you happy cooking for yourself or eating in restaurants? What's more, don't forget about safety. You should make sure it's safe to travel around the place. And also be careful when you are alone or with your children.

The things above may help you choose your holiday place. So, pick the right place and enjoy yourself!

(　　)27. What does the underlined word "It" in Paragraph 2 refer to?

A. Time you'll enjoy.　　B. Weather you'll have.

C. Money you'll spend.　　D. Accommodation you'll find.

(　　)28. How many things are talked about when choosing a holiday place in the passage?

A. Three.　　B. Four.　　C. Five.　　D. Six.

(　　)29. If you have two weeks away from work, and love outdoor sport, which of the following trips is the best for you?

A. A ten-day water-sport trip to Hainan.

B. A two-week rest on the beach in Qingdao.

C. A four-day rock-climbing trip to the USA.

D. A one-week sightseeing in the south of Europe.

(　　)30. What may be the best title for the passage?

A. Going travelling　　B. Having a nice holiday

C. Planning a day out　　D. Picking a holiday place

The past school year comes to a close and a fresh new one is coming. It's time to reflect(反省)—think about what you've learned and note how you've grown and changed, which means great for your future.

Start with a diary.

Do you ever keep diaries? Scientific studies show that making this a regular(定期的) practice can help you become healthier and happier.

But even if you don't keep diaries every day, you might at least think about using one as your own space where you can write down your year-end reflection. Here are some questions to help you get started: What do you want to remember about this school year? What successes are you proudest of? In what ways have you grown? How can you take that growth and build on it next year?

When you're finished, reread your diary. What have you learned about yourself through this exercise?

Draw a more/less list.

Take a piece of paper and draw a line down the centre. On the left, write the word "More" at the top. On the right, write the word "Less". Now, ask yourself what you want more of in your life. If you want more jogging in your life, draw a pair of trainers in the "More" column. Do the same for the "Less" side. If you want less social media, maybe draw a phone.

You might then share your lists in small groups. What ideas do you see on others' lists that could be added to your own?

Write a thank-you letter.

Who would you like to thank for this school year? First, make as long a list as you can.

Then, take a further step by writing a thank-you letter. How has this person helped you to grow over the past year? Think about what you would say to this person if you thought you would never see him or her again. Take a few minutes and write down everything that you are thankful to this person for. Don't overthink it. Just use the words that come straight from your heart.

At last send your letter—by email or handwritten note—to that person. The medium(媒介) isn't important, but sending it is.

In a word, these activities can help you learn more about yourself, show thanks to those who've supported you and start the new school year well with a clear mind!

<tr><td>What</td><td>As the school year ends and a new one begins, it's of great importance for everyone to think about their learning, growth, and __56__.</td></tr>
